Hello again Ann

I'm glad that you find my childlike sense of humour amusing. Try telling that to my DH; he keeps asking me when I intend to grow up. Wot? Me?

That's a lovely story about your cat, and it backs up my theory that we do not choose our cats, rather, they choose us ■■■

I got a very sad email from a friend yesterday, telling me that when they came back from holiday a fortnight ago, their cat, who was being minded by someone else, had gone missing while they were away. They have searched ever since, but can find no trace of her. I haven't said to him, but I think that the cat decided that she had been abandoned and went looking for a new owner.
